The Man That Was Used Up

" sometimes subtitled "A Tale of the Late Bugaboo and Kickapoo Campaign", is a short story and satire by Edgar Allan Poe. It was first published in 1839 in Burton's Gentlemen's Magazine.

node

(Latin nodus, 'knot') is either a redistribution point or a communication endpoint. The definition of a node depends on the network and protocol layer referred to. A physical network node is an active electronic device that is attached to a network, and is capable of creating, receiving, or transmitting information over a communications channel. A passive distribution point such as a distribution frame or patch panel is consequently not a node.

cyborg

(short for "cybernetic organism") is a being with both organic and biomechatronic body parts. The term was coined in 1960 by Manfred Clynes and Nathan S. Kline.

The term cyborg is not the same thing as bionic, biorobot or android; it applies to an organism that has restored function or enhanced abilities due to the integration of some artificial component or technology that relies on some sort of feedback. While cyborgs are commonly thought of as mammals, including humans, they might also conceivably be any kind of organism.

D. S. Halacy's Cyborg: Evolution of the Superman in 1965 featured an introduction which spoke of a "new frontier" that was "not merely space, but more profoundly the relationship between 'inner space' to 'outer space' – a bridge...between mind and matter."

In popular culture, some cyborgs may be represented as visibly mechanical (e.g., Cyborg from DC Comics, the Cybermen in the Doctor Who franchise or The Borg from Star Trek or Darth Vader from Star Wars) or as almost indistinguishable from humans (e.g., the "Human" Cylons from the re-imagining of Battlestar Galactica, etc.). Cyborgs in fiction often play up a human contempt for over-dependence on technology, particularly when used for war, and when used in ways that seem to threaten free will. Cyborgs are also often portrayed with physical or mental abilities far exceeding a human counterpart (military forms may have inbuilt weapons, among other things).

Two incidents, which had happened sometime ago, inspired this article.

First incident.

At that time I was studying in a University, somewhere in the northern Europe. Four seconds after I had exited from the public toilet's door, that I had just visited, I noticed an unknown to me woman exiting from the photocopy room through the next door, just two meters apart, in the same wall.

At that time, it seemed to me strange the fact that, there was no one else in the photocopy room and that the woman didn't carry any book, or any documents, or any bags. Therefore, I wondered, what was she doing in the photocopy room?

I thought that I should look around and then, I noticed another unknown to me person located at the extension of an axis being horizontal, parallel and close to the wall where the two doors were located, holding a camera with its lens directed towards where, the woman and me, were standing.

Luckily, I had already applied the security protocol that I use in such occasions and I also arranged, promptly, to collect sufficient evidence of this incident and to prepare and register, a detailed written report.

Second incident

While I was returning, under the daylight, from a library where I had studied for few hours, I was walking on the pavement of a country road which was crossing a small park. There were neither cars passing by nor other pedestrians and I was enjoying my short walk through the park.

At a certain point, I noticed a noise coming from behind me and I turned back to see what it was. And I saw an unknown to me person having approached me, noiselessly, to a distance of half meter or less and walking just behind me.

Certainly, I got frightened and rushed to go at the other side of the road.

Primarily, the behaviors of those people remain a kind of mystery for me.

From the perspective of my mentality, I could never do such things as, they could create to me unbearable feelings of shame and guilt and also because I would certainly preferred, if I had the freedom of the choice, to spend the precious time of my life in a mechatronics workshop with other German engineers than, to waist my time serving the colonialists' criminality.

However, mysteries are nothing but bundles of our own ignorance which, cease to exist as such if, and when, we succeed in resolving them.

My computer programming skills were taught to me in the Athens' Control Data Institute which it was located, during 1981, at Sygrou Avenue.

For the practical exercises of the various programming languages that were taught, a Cyber 170 super-computer was used along with another mainframe computer and other personal computers.

The operator of the enormous, for the measures of that time, Cyber 170 had been one of my teachers and he had informed me that, the American company which was manufacturing those super-computers, Control Data Corporation, had formed a global computers' network within which, many Cyber 170 were its nodes.

For the communication between those nodes many communication satelites were being used.

The reason of the existence of this huge computer network was the intention of maximizing the degree of exploitation of the enormous processing power they imbedded by, dynamically, distributing to all those network nodes, the processing jobs that were emerging, globally.

In other words, if, in Houston, the calculation of a company's payroll had to become processed while, Houston's Cyber 170 was overloaded with processing of too many other processing tasks and Athens' Cyber 170 remained idle, then, the related raw data (the personell details, their corresponding working hours, etc.) were being transmitted, through the satelites' network, to Athens' Cyber 170, the calculation of the payroll was performed in Athens, and finally, the calculated results of the payroll were transmitted back to Houston.

Are you familiar with what a modern "smartphone" can do?

What if you remove the screen, buttons and other user interface elements, and just leave the CPU, radio and power source, then miniaturize that?

What if you replace the microphone with an MRI type of detection device that detects neural activity, and the speaker with a device that produces not sound but brainwave patterns?

Then implant the device in somebody's brain while you have them unconscious? □ And it has a high-speed connection over a cellular (or other wireless data) network?

Then you leave it there for years and never use it in any way that would cause the implantee to become aware that it was even there.

What if you did this to large numbers of people?

The neurotechnology that the secret agencies have been implanting in people's brains not only allows them to modulate/demodulate the neurological patterns associated with human thought ('synthetic telepathy') but by extension also allows them to cause implanted subjects to speak involuntarily out loud.

In other words, not only are your private thoughts not necessarily your own, but also when you speak it is possible that the impulse to speak and the choice of words was likewise caused remotely by a government handler/operator. In either case, you will not become consciously aware that the technology is active when you think 'their' thoughts or speak 'their' words. The technology BYPASSES YOUR CONSCIOUS WILL AND PERCEPTION. You will think the thought, or speak the word, but in most cases you will not be able to discern that it was not of your own will, except in cases where the handler causes an alarm designed to get your attention, such as causing other physiological responses in your body, or sounds in the environment to which you have been conditioned, occurring simultaneously with the artificially-induced thought or speech.

What this means is that if you are a subject of these capital and outrageous human rights violations, then your operator/handler has the capability to communicate with you by making you speak THEIR words out loud using YOUR voice, all via remote control of your brain itself.

Any complaints you make about this sort of treatment to law enforcement or medical personnel will result in an immediate and automatic diagnosis of schizophrenia which will then make it possible for them to arrest, institutionalize, confine, drug, or further experiment on you against your will

The members of the civilized Nations, like the Germans and the Greeks, we are being taught, since our early childhood, about the notion of the "mutually excluding desires" and then, we are left at our own discretion to find out, through the long endeavor of our lives, that there is one and only one, actual manifestation of this notion.

For example, initially, we are left to believe that, smoking hashish all day and every day (24/365) is mutually excluding with having a clever mind, as hashish's smoking destroys the brain and makes imperative the transplanting of certain endocrine glands.

However, one by one, what, initially, may have appeared as another manifestation of mutually excluding desires becomes a false perception.

The already accomplished human brain's reverse engineering may have given the ability to, involuntarily, wirelessly and remotely, access, separately, the data processing part of the brain and the memory part of the brain, and exploit them at will. And even further, the cloning to a remote hard disk drive of the memory part of the brain and the removal of the corresponding brain tissue in order to enforce an utmost dependency/slavery of the individual upon the remote hard disk drive handler, has, from what it seems, become also possible.

For example, by using the current technological means, the members of any, hashish regular usage embedding, National culture may enjoy his or her traditions while, for e.g. making a difficult repair on his or her car, could employ the brain of, e.g. an indigenous Greek engineer.

Or, for becoming able to build even higher skyscrapers somewhere in the American continent, the inhabitants of that continent, even if they belonged to a decadent Nation, they could employ the brains of, e.g. a group of the most prominent German engineers and materialize their intended goal effortlessly.

However, none of the existing and the future, technological advances can and shall, be able to secure, for the benefit of those who exploit those technologies, the ability to remain a member of the human species; as, being unable to love and remaining a member of the human species, remains and shall always be, mutually excluding.

Is there anyone, from those who participate to the contemporary colonialism and the related abuse of the existing mind-control technology, who has the ability to love?

Is there anyone, from those who participate to the contemporary colonialism and the related abuse of the existing mind-control technology, who hasn't already become an atrocious monster?

Is there anyone, from those who participate to the contemporary colonialism and the related abuse of the existing mind-control technology, who is able to enjoy loving, e.g. either the excellent and kind Germans or a symbolic Amanda somewhere at the Greek coast?

From what it seems, the members of many Nations have difficulty to comprehend that, as far as trying to impose a global dictatorship by employing the existing technological advances while imagining that they retain their own humanity, the "Game" is over. Those who desire to remain members of our human kind already know which are their options; and the rest, they do know also, their options.
