

Open-sea Sailing and Me

Συντάχθηκε απο τον/την Χρήστος Μπούμπουλης (Christos Boumpoulis)
Παρασκευή, 26 Ιούλιος 2019 11:37 -

Sailing in Rough Seas | Sailing Britican #8
{youtube}K0BorgTMeOI{/youtube}
www.youtube.com/watch?v=K0BorgTMeOI

Open-sea Sailing and Me

One of the sport that I most love doing is open-sea sailing.

My personal character matches so much this recreational activity that, people of my social surrounding, by simply observing me for a while, frequently they may conclude that few days back I was doing sailing.

My involvement with sailing as a recreational activity I owe it, by a certain perspective, to the American College in Greece.

More specifically, during the early '80s my, then, new friends, Faidon Agorastakis, Eirini Aggelopoulou and Elisavet Glarou, all students of the American College of Greece, they were already involved, I guess with the encouragement of the college, to this sport and they were kind enough to introduce me also to the joy of participating as crue to travelling with a sailing boat.

I was so excited that I immediately arranged to get my diploma as a sailings-boat skipper. And the years that followed I enjoyed many trips, mostly within the Aegean sea, with open-sea sailing boats.

Christos Boumpoulis
economist

Appendix

The American College of Greece - Institutional Video 2017
{youtube}eHH2ys1wO8U{/youtube}
www.youtube.com/watch?v=eHH2ys1wO8U